

POLITICAL SCIENCE COLLOQUIUM

"Political Science students running for office in Hawai'i"

by

Benton Rodden (current graduate student in the Political Science Department)

Amy Perruso (Ph.D. in Political Science)

Ikaika Hussey (M.A. in Political Science)

with Neal Milner (Moderator)

How do you go about running for office in Hawai'i? How do you organize and run a good campaign? What are the main lessons learned? Benton Rodden (current graduate student in the Political Science Department) and Amy Perruso (Ph.D. in Political Science) both ran for the state legislature, while Ikaika Hussey (M.A. in Political Science) ran for city council.

Benton, Amy and Ikaika will talk about why they ran for office, what they learned about politics in doing so, and how their study of political science helped (or hindered) their campaigns. This is a great opportunity to hear advice from seasoned campaigners about how to run for office in Hawai'i.
